The Phillips Collection Presents peter campus: there somewhere

Exhibition debuts the phillips quartets, a new series of four video works by the pioneering artist.

WASHINGTON, DC— The Phillips Collection presents peter campus: there somewhere, a focused exhibition of the work of acclaimed new media artist peter campus. The exhibition juxtaposes one of campus's important early videos from the 1970s with a selection of recent landscape videos, collectively known as the phillips quartets. The suite's four videos will be exhibited together for the first time, and include three works that have never been publicly shown. the phillips quartets reflects the museum's enriched focus on exhibiting works by living artists while honoring the founding vision of Duncan and Marjorie Phillips. there somewhere is on view at The Phillips Collection from January 17 through May 3, 2026. Press are invited to preview the exhibition by appointment on Friday, January 16, from 10 am–5 pm; contact lcantrell@phillipscollection.org to RSVP.

peter campus (b. 1937, New York, NY) is widely recognized as a foundational figure in the history of video and new media art. Among peers including Nam June Paik and Bill Viola, campus has been instrumental in redefining how technology and video intersect with contemporary artistic practice, elevating video as a fine art form. there somewhere presents key single-channel works: the psychologically charged Head of a Man with Death on His Mind (1978), and the phillips quartets, composed of lament (2023), there somewhere (2023), blessingway (2024), and no direction known (2024), all of which will be exhibited together for the first time. The title of the series references T.S. Eliot's late work Four Quartets (1943), a poetic and spiritual meditation on time and place. Like Eliot, campus engages with how physical landscape evokes a poetics of timelessness.

“peter campus’s work invites us to slow down and experience the act of seeing,” says Jonathan P. Binstock, Vradenburg Director and CEO of The Phillips Collection. “His stunning, poetic investigations of landscape, selfhood, and space feel especially resonant in our current moment, and align well with museum founder Duncan Phillips’s vision of art as an experiential, emotional, and subjective experience.”

Guest curated by John G. Hanhardt, the exhibition pairs campus’s early work emphasizing the human figure with later landscapes filmed along the tranquil coastline near campus’s home in Brookhaven, Long Island. Together, these works trace his engagement with perception, ecology, time, and memory. “These are quiet, abstract, and poetic meditations on place,” says Hanhardt. “campus’s manipulation of image surface and tone invites deep contemplation, speaking to the mind, body, and spirit.”

Over the past two decades, campus has focused his lens on the natural beauty of Long Island’s South Shore, filming in high resolution at carefully chosen coastal locations. “the camera adds to my experience,” campus writes. “it expands my senses and adds something i could not have known any other way.” Through subtle shifts in light and motion, during filming and in post-production, he transforms the screen into a meditative canvas. Despite these gentle movements, the works are marked by a profound stillness and quietude.

“This presentation continues The Phillips Collection’s commitment to exploring innovative, experiential media-based art,” says Tie Jojima, Curator of Global Contemporary Art. “The exhibition highlights campus’s ongoing inquiry into technology and perception, inviting visitors to engage intently with video as a powerful expression of the human spirit.”

there somewhere unfolds across two adjoining galleries, creating a space for contemplation and dialogue. Like the Rothko Room and Laib Wax Room, the phillips quartets animates the museum as a space for intimate, emotionally affirming encounters with art.

He was senior curator of film and media arts at the Smithsonian American Art Museum where he established the Nam June Paik archive. As consulting senior curator of film and media art at the Memorial Art Gallery of the University of Rochester he created its media art collection and commissioned artworks.

ABOUT THE PHILLIPS COLLECTION

Founded in 1921, The Phillips Collection is a welcoming home for all where the vision and spirit of artists thrive in intimate settings. As the first museum of modern art in the United States, the Phillips houses one of the world's most celebrated Impressionist, Post-Impressionist, and modern art collections, and continues to grow its permanent collection with the work of important living artists. Its distinctive domestically scaled architecture combines three structures built over more than 125 years, among them the former home of the founders, Duncan and Marjorie Phillips. The Phillips's impact extends nationally and internationally through its diverse, scholarly exhibitions; award-winning education programs for educators, students, and adults; and renowned Phillips Music series. Popular and impactful programs include those focused on art and wellness, its festive monthly Phillips after 5 events, and intimate Living Room talks. Through authentic programs and partnerships at Phillips@THEARC, the museum's satellite location in Southeast DC, the Phillips extends its reach into Wards 7 and 8 and Prince George's County, Maryland. The Phillips Collection is a private, non-government museum, supported primarily by donations.

peter campus: there somewhere

“The camera adds to my experience, it increases my sensibility.
It expands my senses and adds something I could not have known any other way.”—peter campus

This exhibition features five artworks by peter campus (b. 1937, New York, New York) drawn from his innovative and influential body of work. Experimenting in various forms of the video medium, from single-channel video to the expanded forms of installation art, his art practice has played a key role in transforming the aesthetics of the moving image. This exhibition features artworks that are shaped by a conceptual and reflective inquiry into the nature of perception of the self and of the world around us.

By bringing together one of campus’s pioneering video works from 1978, centered on the human figure, with a series of recent pieces created over the past three years that depict the natural world, the exhibition highlights the artist’s ongoing and transformative contribution to contemporary art.

This exhibition is organized by The Phillips Collection.

Essential support is provided by the Carolyn Alper Fund for Contemporary Art.

This exhibition is also made possible by Eric Richter and Charles Shoener.

The brief sun flames the ice, on pond and ditches,
In windless cold that is the heart’s heat,
Reflecting in a watery mirror
A glare that is blindness in the early afternoon.
—Excerpt from T. S. Eliot, “Little Gidding,” 1942

the phillips quartets features four recent video works by peter campus—there somewhere (2023), lament (2023), blessingway (2024), and no direction known (2024)—filmed near his home on Long Island’s South Shore. Subtle shifts in water, light, and organic forms transform the screen into his expansive canvas animated by movement and stillness. Drawing inspiration from the local ecology, campus reveals worlds of natural beauty.

The title of the series references T. S. Eliot’s major late work Four Quartets, published in 1943, a poetic and spiritual meditation on time and place. Like Eliot, campus engages with how the physical landscape evokes a poetics of timelessness, capturing fleeting visual phenomena as complex and richly textured moving image compositions.

UPCOMING EXHIBITIONS

The information below was updated in January 2026 and is subject to change.

Miró and the United States

March 21–July 5, 2026

Miró and the United States explores the fertile artistic conversation between Spanish artist Joan Miró (1893–1983) and American artists during the period of the artist’s greatest transatlantic contacts from the 1940s to the 1960s. This exhibition will trace Miró’s relationships with American artists, collectors, and institutions, illustrating the ways this exchange spurred new inspiration and experimentation on both sides of the Atlantic. Featuring Alexander Calder, Louise Bourgeois, Lee Krasner, Norman Lewis, Jackson Pollock, Helen Frankenthaler, and Adolph Gottlieb, among others, this exhibition will enrich our understanding of the development of post-war art.

The exhibition is organized for The Phillips Collection by Elsa Smithgall, in collaboration with Marko Daniel and Matthew Gale, with the support of Dolors Rodríguez Roig, at the Fundació Joan Miró, Barcelona.

Juried Invitational

August 1–September 20, 2026

Honoring its long-standing dedication to the exhibiting, acquiring, and supporting the work of living artists in the Washington, DC, area, The Phillips Collection is proud to present a juried invitational exhibition highlighting the work of artists living and working in the region. The exhibition invites submissions of recent works across all visual arts media, including drawing, printmaking, painting, mixed media, photography, sculpture, and video.

This exhibition is organized by The Phillips Collection.

Avery, Gottlieb & Rothko: By the Sea

October 24, 2026–January 24, 2027

This exhibition will tell the story of the lifelong friendship between three towering figures in American art: Milton Avery (1885–1965), Adolph Gottlieb (1903–1974), and Mark Rothko (1903–1970), and highlight the inspiration they derived from summers in Gloucester, Massachusetts, on Cape Ann. Through approximately 75 paintings, drawings, prints, and watercolors from the 1920s to the 1960s, this exhibition will reflect for the first time the artistic exchange between these three artists, the experiences they shared, and the support they provided to each other. Many of the works in this exhibition have never been on public view.

This exhibition is organized by the Cape Ann Museum, Gloucester, Massachusetts, in partnership with The Phillips Collection.
